Oxidation of Secondary Alcohols to Ketones

Although chromic acid and permanganate are powerful oxidizing agents the reaction only requires a two-electron transfer. The product is a ketone.

A similar mechanism for the permanganate occurs except that the media is basic.